WHY PITTSBURG MUST HAVE A SHOW

Margaretta Schneider, a German woman about 60 years of age, recently moved into the three-story brick dwelling at No. i
West Fifth street. But little was known on her beyond the fact that two women, presumably ber daughters, lived with her.
About 3:30 o'clock this afternoon the old lady came to the front door and called to one of the men employed at the engine

WHY THE EXPOSITION MUST GO. Chairman Bindley then called upon the members to make remarks, and Messrs. Marvin, Leggett and De Voe spoke of the necessity of an exposition, and contessed themselves surprised at the lack of interest in Pittsburg. Hon, A. C. Robertson then prose and talked very pointedly. He spoke from the standpoint of a workingman, and he was surprised the workingmen of Pittsburg are not in a worse condition than they are now, because capital has never done anything to encourage them yet it is to the interest of the wealthy class to interest and instruct a banque their workers, and the building of an ex-position will solve the problem. He could not praise the proposed polytechnic school

Immediately upon the close of these remarks a committee was at once appointed to provide for a mass meeting. Their names will be given to-morrow, and the public meeting will be held within the next week. Knives and pistols, and demanded money or life. Two gentlemen collided on a busy thoroughfare, And used language toward each other quite emphatic, While one was young and dressed with great care, The other looked seedy, aged and rheumatic.

"You must be trying to catch a fast train?"
The old man quite shrilling exclaimed;
"Or else something heavy is pressing your brain. For it's not your fault I am not maimed."

At first, to be angry, the youth was disposed, As he was only partly to blame, But being well bred, as might be supposed, Decided to explain how it came.

He said: "I was in a great hurry. To reach a big downtown store, And I was in quite a flurry, Lest my neighbors should get there before,

You see: they have great bargain prices, Which lasts for a week or ten days; Their clearance sale so many entices, That I think to deal with them pays, Lamps, cut glass and high art potters At prices that are quite astound It is really like an honest lottery,

So many prices are there abounding. Elecant sets for tea or dinner Or for fish, game or ice cream; A man who buys there is a winner

His smile on gloom would cast a gleam. French, China and bronze and onyx tables, And all the latest styles of clocks, At prices that read like fairy fables, To make room for new lines of stocks.

Their toilet sets are also beauties,
The ladies o'er their quality rave;
And one of married men's foremost duties,

Is to buy them there and money save." "Where is this place?" the old man cried. "Directly to it together we'll go;"
"It's on Penn avenue," the youth replied,
"You will see their business card
